

<< Previous Topic Next Topic >> Return to Index
Serial number register for vintage Bsa's ?October 16 2010 at 9:57 PMI don't know if it would be a lot of work to set up, but I always thought a serial number register would be very interesting. The survival rate of these fine rifles has always fascinated me and it would good fun to enter the surviving serial numbers on a database especially as the production runs are well documented.Cheers MorganEdit MessageDelete MessageLock ThreadMake StickyRespond to this message
Author	Reply
Garvin(Premier Login Garvin2)Owner	Hi MorganOctober 16 2010, 11:31 PMIt's a nice idea but I know from my experience of having a (very small) database on the Falke forum that inputting the numbers can become quite a pain.For various reasons it seems likely that a good percentage of vintage BSAs have survived and of course many tens of thousands were made, so it could be a massive undertaking!And there's no way on a forum like this that people can enter their own numbers into a single list, which in any case would probably quickly get out of control...But it would definitely be worth doing it for, say, Military Patterns or No.3 BSAs (.25 cal), of which relatively few were made and even fewer survive.☺-----The Falke forumThe Vintage BSA ForumEdit MessageDelete MessageLock ThreadRespond to this message
<< Previous Topic Next Topic >>Return to Index	